

Vineyards and winery since 1966

Wines with soul and soil from the heart of Spain
Extremadura

History

The winemaking tradition of the Coloma family began at the end of the 19th century when Don Francisco Coloma started making home-made wines for the local market of his native town, Villanueva de los Infantes Valladolid, Spain.

Years later, one of his grandsons, José Félix, seeking a warmer weather, decided to continue the winemaking tradition down in Extremadura.

It was in Alvarado, along the river-banks of Limonetes creek, a nearby tributary of the Guadiana river, where he planted the first vines. Taking advantage of this gentle climate, José Félix Coloma has been growing Spanish and international varieties since 1966.

Coloma Garnacha Roja (100% varietal) is an unoaked Spanish fruit bomb. Purple-colored, it exhibits aromas and flavors of cherry, plum and black raspberry. Full-flavored and ripe, this terrific value should drink well over the next 18 months.

Coloma, Garnacha Seleccion Vino de la Tierra de Extremadura 45-year-old vines grown on alluvial soils near the river Guadiana.

Dark – the color of black cherries. Lifted, pure Garnacha character – smells ripe and spicy, peppery and warm-hearted, with dark-fruit sweetness. Lovely fruit. Very juicy, dark cherry and blackcurrant flavors, primary and bright but made more sophisticated by fine, firm, dry fruit tannins rounded out by fruit sweetness on the finish.
